In the meantime, the frantic parents and their neighbors instituted a search. They scoured the banks of the river and all surrounding terrain and had virtually given up hope when Dolley telephoned that the child had been found.

Young Jones was almost as glad to be back home as his parents were to have him back after the two hour expedition.

Nevada County Is Closed To Pheasant Shooting By Fish and Game Law.

November 15 is a red letter day for California hunters with the season opening one-half hour before sunrise on quail, pheasant, brush and cottontail rabbits.

According to reports from warden of the state division of fish and game there are plenty of quail and shooting should be good unless there is more rain between now and opening day. Rain will scatter the birds and they will be difficult to find. The bag limit on quail is 10 per day in the aggregate of all species and 20 per calendar week.

Pheasants are reported to be in abundance, cocks are bunched up and in full plumage. Only two male pheasants may be taken in one day, with two in possession, and eight during the ten day season. When making plans to shoot pheasants, hunters should remember the following counties are closed: Alpine, Amador, Calaveras, El Dorado, Marin, Mariposa, Nevada, Plumas, San Benito, San Diego, San Luis Obispo, San Mateo, Trinity and Tuolumne. Modoc county east of the Warner Mountains and north of the Mill Creek Road and north of the road extending eastward from Lake City to the Nevada State Line, will be closed to pheasant shooting; and Siskiyou county west of Highway 99 and Highway 97, excepting Scott River watershed. Fish and game district 2½ in Mendocino county will also be closed.

Not more than fifteen brush or cottontail rabbits may be taken in one day, or 30 per week, of either or both species. Rabbits are reported to be scarce in San Diego county, but otherwise there seems to be a good crop.

Hunters are requested to return all tags found on quail and pheasants to the main office of the division of fish and game, Ferry Building, San Francisco, giving the date and exact place where the bird was killed.

November 15th Marks Opening Of Hunting For Pheasants, Quail

.: Sun.: Beams

by WALTER M. BARRETT

It is a pretty well established fact that when the laws of nature are constantly violated the time will come when the violators will reap nature's punishment. No doubt we can continue to permit the cutting of our young pine trees for ornamental purposes in remote cities for many years before they are all gone. However we should face the fact that when all the young trees are gone and forest fires, blister rust and other pestilence have taken their toll, our forests will be gone. We wonder if Christmas trees have any part in national defense or if, in reality, we are actually destroying nature's most valuable gift to our nation's defense. It is not our purpose to censure the men engaged in the harvest of trees or even those who thrive on the profits from the sales. So long as the laws not only condone but encourage this practice as an industry, men would perhaps be foolish to pass up such an opportunity, but some time it must stop and we again wonder when the powers that be will see beyond the small recompense now available.

Not since the last World War has the need for the American Red Cross been so obvious. Now we have not only the many national requirements to fulfill but must give to the suffering civilian population as well as soldiers of foreign lands. Truckee's quota of $200 to be raised between now and November 30 is small enough when the vast benefits to be derived from the money obtained is considered.

Do ALL your Christmas shopping in Truckee this year. You will benefit yourself and your town.

Derailments Cause S. P. Traffic Delays On Last Weekend

Itinerant Mexican is Hurt In First Mishap Over Past Weekend On Hill.

Southern Pacific traffic was delayed both Saturday and Sunday by two separate derailments of freight cars west of Donner Summit.

In the first mishap which occurred at 11:30 o'clock Saturday morning, five heavily laden freight cars were derailed at Cisco. An itinerant Mexican suffered a broken leg when he leaped from the train as he saw the cars in front of the one on which he was riding leave the tracks and overturn. A second man was slightly hurt but refused medical aid. The Mexican was taken to a hospital immediately.

Traffic was resumed shortly after 6 o'clock Saturday night after the wreck had been cleared.

The second similar accident occurred Troy when load shifting in a freight car caused three full box cars to leave the rails late Sunday evening. All traffic, including the west bound City of San Francisco was delayed until early Monday. No injuries resulted in the second wreck.

In both wrecks the wrecking equipment from Roseville was summoned to aid scores of workmen to clear the tracks.

"NAVY INTELLIGENCE"

Is it necessary to be a high school graduate in order to enlist in the Navy?

No. Navy enlistees need not be high school graduates. All applicants will be given an examination containing approximately 100 questions. A grade of 50 per cent or better on this examination is sufficiently high to pass the Navy educational standards. However, a high school education will be valuable to the seaman during his Navy enlistment.

If I enlist in the Navy or Naval Reserve, will I be sent to a Navy Trade School?

All new recruits are sent to one of four Naval Training Stations and after a training period they may take examinations for entrance into Navy Trade Schools. Those recruits who pass their examinations with sufficiently high grades are sent to Navy Trade Schools before assignment to the fleet. While attending these schools, they will receive regular Navy pay and free schooling valued at $1500.

What is the greatest possible pay I can expect to earn during my first term of enlistment?

It is possible to earn as much as $126 a month by the end of your first term of enlistment, and remember that your clothing, lodging, medical and dental care are all supplied free.

After I have served my term of enlistment, what benefits do I get for re-enlistment?

Depending on your rate and length of service, you can get a cash bonus up to $300 plus 30 days leave with pay.

What does the term "ash can" mean in the Navy?

An "ash can" is a slang term applied to the depth charge used to combat submarines. The average "ash can" is a container filled with approximately 300 pounds of T.N.T. and can be dropped overboard from a ship and so controlled as to explode at depths ranging from 35 to 300 feet. These are generally carried by the fast ships in the fleet, as a boat dropping a charge regulated to explode at 70 feet depth must move away from the explosion area at a speed of 25 knots or more. These "ash cans" are either rolled off the stern or shot from "y-guns" which hurl one right and one left simultaneously.

MIGRANTS TREK WEST

Once more the big trek is on and the jalopies are westward bound. California, the hub of national defense activities, again glitters like a promised land to the workless workers of the Southwest. In the first nine months of 1941, inspectors at the California border counted the arrival by auto of 85,452 agricultural workers, an increase of 35 per cent over the comparable periods in 1939 and 1940. Few members of this migrant army can qualify for the defense jobs many of them hopefully seek. Nevertheless, the migrant stream once again flows at full tide.

THE CHRISTIAN WAY

Christian thinking requires love. Blinded by prejudices or swayed by some selfish whims, men's thoughts are not sound nor are their actions safe. So there must ever be this combination and this order—power, love and soundness of mind.

So we gird up the loins of our mind and continue to love in a world of hate and keep on doing good even if the tendency of the age is evil.—Rev. John H. Cable, D.D.

THE BIGGEST PROBLEM

The real problems of war never arise until after a war is over. When this war is won we can lose everything we are arming to defend, if, in the transition to peace, we slip back to a low national income with its inevitable unemployment, suffering, chaos and loss freedom. To discover ways and to work out the plans of shifting from full employment for defense to full employment for peace is a matter of outstanding public concern.

Dale Carnegie

In 1915, during the first World war, a young aviator went up to engage in his first air fight. The enemy saw him overhead, anti-aircraft guns were unlimbered and began to rain steel at him. A shell struck his airplane and with the speed of gravity the young aviator plunged into the Gulf of Riga. Just as his hope began to wane, a battleship steamed toward a piece of floating wreckage to which he was clinging and he was lifted out of the water, but with only one leg. The other had been shot away.

There he was on his first trip into the air as a fighter, and back with one leg gone. This young man was Alexander de Seversky. He loved flying. Was he going to give it up simply because he had lost a leg? No, sir, not he, not a man with his determination and grit. So he went into the engineering end of aviation. And now has a factory at Farmingdale, Long Island, New York. You've heard of the Seversky planes. Well, they're his. Here are three of his accomplishments: He invented skills for flying boats. He proposed refueling in the air. Broke the world's record for amphibian planes.

At the time he lost his leg, he thought his life as an aviator was over. It went into another branch of it; made a success.

The number of men who have made outstanding successes after having lost a leg is most heartening. Benny Howard is research pilot for the United Air Lines, but he only has one leg. He left the other down in New Mexico two years ago as the result of an accident. But recently he took up the Douglas D C 4, the largest land plane ever flown at that time, on its trial trip.

When Herbert Marshall was a young soldier in France he planned on his return to London to go on the stage—to become an actor. A bomb exploded. His leg was torn off. But he became an actor anyway! You've seen him on the screen—he's one of the best actors in Hollywood.

Did you ever hear of the war play "What Price Glory?" It was written in collaboration with Laurence Stallings. Laurence Stallings ought to know a good deal about war. He lost a leg in one.

You may have heard of St. John Irvine, the playwright, who has had several successful plays. One leg. War. Orrick Johns of St. Louis, who wrote "The Life and Times of My Father" has only one leg. Street car.

In the United States there are 33,000 amputations each year. The people who lose a vital limb have to adapt themselves to a new mode of life. But they can do it; not only can they adapt themselves to a new mode of life but they can make a success of it. The important thing is not to give up because something happens to you. Adjust yourself to a new way of life, keep on going.

California is the leading honey-producing state in the nation.

My Place In The Sun

The Truckee Outing Club can consider itself lucky to have the unstinting services of Sig Ulland in preparing adequate ski jumps in the winter sports park. Bob Bowers, Ang Besio, Dave Bollender, Katie Ulland and four or five youngsters and your columnist were up at Sig's new jump sight to help him out last Sunday. The volume of work that man can turn out just for the love of the work is a thing of wonder and a joy to behold. His friendly manner and his ceaseless labor was an inspiration to all of us—in fact I was so affected that my back was stiff for two days after. As important as the business meetings of the club are, if you must choose between them and the work days, a lot more can be accomplished with a little more work and a lot less talk and complaining.

the Ski Daddle was the best dance ever pun on by the Lake Tahoe Ski Club as more people thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Much credit is due all the hard-working committee members and President and Mrs. Harry Johanson.

The annual affair was held at the Tahoe Community Center on Saturday night and brought out hundreds of merrymakers from Tahoe City, Reno, Truckee and other nearby communities. The hall was decorated by members with evergreen boughs, pine cones, snow men and winter sports scenes created by the President and Mrs. Johanson. One of the major attractions was a picture gallery of drawings (caricatures) of members in characteristic poses which furnished much entertainment for the crowd.

Conga chains, rhumbas and various modern dances were mingled with the old time favorites such as the broom dance, but the theme-dance of the evening—the Champagne Slalom—was won by Miss Helen Worden and Jack Starratt who maneuvered the tricky slalom course with much Vorlage and were awarded the champagne service donated by Chris Boyarides of Honey-bunch Fountain. The Prize Schottische for which the champagne service was donated by George Bacchi of Bacchi's Inn, was won by Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Quam, first, and Mrs. A. M. Henry and A. M. Anderson, second. The award for the most peculiar and original dance was awarded to Mrs.
Carl Becholdt, Jr., and Billy Becholdt and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Watson won honorable mention and second place.

The following committees are responsible mainly for the success of the social affair:

PROGRAMS: Mrs. Johanson, Mrs.
John Burns, Mrs. Norman Mayfield,
Mrs. Martin Spitsen and Miss Annie Gallerani.

Better Light
HELPS KEEP EYES RIGHT!

PEOPLE say modern lighting that is "easy on the eyes" makes the eyes feel better... And they are right... Good lighting brings out the beauty of the home furnishings...
It aids personal beauty, too.

Light that is glaring brightness or that is dim and gloomy makes hard work of seeing. It causes squints and frowns and scowls and brings on many premature wrinkles and face-lines.

Good, modern lighting merely means the right kind of light, and the right amount of light where you read or sew or use your eyes. And you can have it easily, quickly, inexpensively.

CHAPTER VII Synopsis

Harley Longstreet, broker, dies on a trolley from poison scratched into his hand by a needle-pierced cork in his pocket. He and his guests were on their way to celebrate his engagement to Cherry Browne, an actress. The others were his partner DeWitt, DeWitt's superstitious wife Fern—with whom Longstreet had had an affair—Jeanne, DeWitt's daughter and her fiancé Christopher Lord, Cherry's friend Pollux, Ahearn, friend of DeWitt, Imperiale, middle-aged Latin, and Michael Collins, brawny Irishman. Questioned, each member of the party seemed unfriendly toward the dead man. Bruno and Thumm, investigators, think DeWitt guilty—Longstreet had a sinister hold on him. Drury Lane, retired Shakespearean actor, says he knows who the murderer is, but will identify him only as Mr. X. One night the investigators and Lane go to the Weehawken Ferryhouse in answer to an anonymous note. A man is murdered on an incoming boat. He is identified as Charles Wood, conductor of the murder car—writer of the anonymous note. DeWitt denies talking to Wood, but in Wood's pocket is a cigar bearing DeWitt's private mark. Guinness, motorman of the murder car, identifies Wood by an ugly scar on the leg. DeWitt offers no explanation. Lane's attendant Quacey disguises the actor with make-up. They start out together. Inspector Thumm appears at Wood's boarding house to find his bank book. Thumm tells the officer stationed at the boarding house to phone him next day at 2:30. Then he goes to a waiting automobile and rubs off some makeup. It is Lane. He also interviews DeWitt's butler.

"What reaction had this on Mr. DeWitt?"

Jorgens seemed disturbed. "Why, Mr. DeWitt took his coming and going quite for granted, sir."

"Very good, organs. Now will you get Mr. DeWitt on the phone, tell him you are calling for me and that I most urgently request a luncheon appointment today."

The appointment was made. They would meet at the Exchange Club. Lane instructed Quacey to call every South American consul in New York and try to locate one who might have had contact with Maquinchao.

Over coffee, Lane said: "Mr. DeWitt, my primary reason for spending an hour in conversation with you is that I feel, in my own blundering way, I may be able to help you. In fact, that you require help of a common variety."

"That's decent of you," said DeWitt gleefully. "I realize the dangerous position I'm in. I'm being constantly watched. You yourself have been questioning my servants..."

"Would you mind, then, if I asked you a question or two? My concern with this investigation is only with the end in view of getting at the Truth. There are some things I must know if I am to make further progress."

DeWitt looked up swiftly. "Further progress? Have you reached any conclusions, Mr. Lane?"

"Two fundamental ones—I know who killed Longstreet and Wood, if you would term that progress."

DeWitt paled as if Lane had struck him. "But, if you know aren't you going to go something about it?"

"I am. Unfortunately, we are dealing with literal-minded Justice; she demands tangible instruments of conviction. Will you help me?"

DeWitt's eyes frantically sought to discover precisely what this unusual prosecutor knew. "I'll tell you what I can, Mr. Lane. But—how shall I say it?—my hands are—tied... There's one thing you simply mustn't ask me—the identity of the person with whom I had an appointment Wednesday night."

Lane shook his head good-humoredly. "You make it doubly difficult by maintaining silence on one of the most interesting points in the case. However, we will waive that—for the present. Both you and Longstreet made your fortunes in South America. In what country was your mine located?"

"Uruguay."

"Mr. Maquinchao is a Uruguayan, then?"

DeWitt's eyes clouded with suspicion. "How do you know about Maquinchao? Jorgens, of course. The old fool."

Lane said sharply: "The wrong attitude, Mr. DeWitt. Jorgens, a faithful servant, gave me information solely because he felt I asked in your interest. You can do no better than to emulate him—unless you question my purpose."

"I'm sorry. Yes, Maquinchao is an Uruguayan, but please don't press me about him."

"But I must. Who is he? Why his unique activity while your guest? I am determined to have the answers."

DeWitt traced a pattern on the cloth with a spoon. "Purely a business visit, Mr. Lane. Maquinchao is the—thes cout of certain South American public utility locations—wanted our office to handle a bond issue."

"Why did he stay so long?"

"I don't know, unless he visited other financing places."

"Can you give me his address?"

"I don't believe I know. He travels extensively."

Lane walked to the desk. "Will you please direct me to Dr. Morris, your club physician, then to the Club secretary?"

An hour or so later, Drury Lane entered District Attorney Bruno's office and found Inspector Thumm hunched over a telephone, his face a study in incredulity. Thumm jerked a heavy eyebrow in greeting, his ear hooked to the receiver.

"Now listen," said the Inspector, his face so red it seemed about to burst from impotent rage. "Let me get this straight... Shut up, will you? You say I told you to call me at half-past two this afternoon and remind me to give you something to do? You're drunk! What? You helped me pick up the rug? What rug, you jackass?... Maybe—" His eyes focused on Mr. Drury Lane, who was watching him with an affectionate amusement, and his jaw sagged. A surly grin spread over his face and he growled into the telephone: "Okay, I changed my mind. Just hang around the room." He hung up and turned to Lane plopping his elbows on the desk. Bruno looked from one to the other in bewilderment. "Well, Mr. Lane, that's one on me, hey?"

"Inspector," Lane said gravely, "if I have ever entertained doubts concerning your sense of humor, they are now eternally dispelled."

"What is all this about?" demanded Bruno.

"Yesterday I went to Weehawken. Interviewed Mrs. Murphy, searched Wood's room, found a bank-book under the carpet, assisted, mind you, by a man who has known me for six years, then I walked out," Thumm replied. "It's something of a miracle, because at the same time I was in my office jawing with you."

Bruno stared at Lane, broke into a laugh. "That's a little unfair, Mr. Lane. And a little dangerous."

"Not at all. My familiar is the world's premier make-upman, Mr. Bruno. I must humbly ask your pardon, Inspector. My reason was serious and peremptory. Perhaps my instruction to your operative was a childish prank, but even that was dictated by a desire to inform you, unconventionally to be sure, of the impersonation."

"Next time you might let me take a look for myself," grunted Thumm. "Frankly, I don't lie—Well, let it go. Let's have the bank-book."

"My visit," said Lane in a brisk tone, really is induced by a desire for a copy of the complete list of ferry passengers."

Bruno explored the top drawer of his desk and handed Lane a thin sheaf of papers, remarking: "The other day you said you'd like to be informed before we take definite action..."

"The ax falls," murmured Lane. "What precisely?"

"The arrest of DeWitt for murder of Wood. Thumm and I are agreed that we have a case. When the Commissioner heard my story he told me to shoot. It won't be hard to secure an indictment."

Lane looked grave. "I gatehr, then, that you and Inspector Thumm believe DeWitt killed Longstreet also?"

"Naturally," said Thumm. "This Mr. X of yours is behind the whole business. The two crimes were committed by the same hand, with motives that fit like gloves."

"A remarkably astute phrase," said Lane. "And when is this step to be taken?"

"There really is no hurry," replied Bruno. "We'll probably arrest him within the next day—if something doesn't happen to change our minds."

"It is too premature," said the actor. "You have a case, but how strong is it?"

"Listen," snapped Thumm, "this isn't getting us anywhere. You've heard our side of the story. What's yours?"

"I find, gentlemen," Lane said, twisting about to face both men, "that you make the identical error in your attitude toward crime and punishment that many producers make in connection with drama and its interpretation. Periodically we are reminded of the immortality of the one dramatic immortal by some producer's announcement that he will one more stage 'Hamlet.' What is the first thing he does? He scrambles about drawing up impressive legal documents, all timed to a nicety with the publicized intention to star Mr. Evans or the great Mr. Gielguld. The public responds in exactly the same manner—going to view a man and overlooking the witchery of the play. The emphasis is misplaced. You commit the identical error when you shape a crime, redesign it to fit DeWitt instead of measuring DeWitt against the fixed elements of the crime. The problem should be attacked always as an unalterable bundle of facts; and if a hypothesis results in conflicting loose ends, it is the hypothesis that is wrong. Do you follow men, gentlemen?"

"My dear Mr. Lane," Bruno's whole manner was subtly altered. It's a brilliant analogy and I don't doubt it's basically true. But, how often can we use the method you suggest? We're pressed for action. If a few things are cloudy, it's not because we're wrong but because they're unexplained, perhaps irrelevant odds and ends."

"A debatable question... As a matter of fact, Mr. Bruno," replied Lane abruptly. "I agree with you that the law should take its course. Arrest Mr. DeWitt by all means." He rose smiling, bowed and quickly left the room.

That evening Quacey reported he had phoned most of the South American consulates and learned nothing. Most of the consuls were on vacation.

"Quacey," said Lane, "Did you try the Uruguayan consul?"

"Uruguay?" squeaked the old man. "Is that a country in South America?" He made a face, and pattered out. Ten minutes later he was back, grinning.

"A noble suggestion, Mr. Drury. The Uruguayan consul won't be back until Saturday, October the tenth. He's gone back to Uruguay and no one in his consulate can—or is willing to—supply information. His name is Juan Ajos. And Inspector Thumm just telephoned that he has just arrested John DeWitt. He said he will get a quick indictment but the trial will not come up for about a month, as the Court of General Sessions does not convene before October."

"In that case," said Lane, "we will permit Mr. Juan Ajos to spend his sabbatical in peace. You have earned a rest, Caliban. Off with you!"

Mrs. Fern DeWitt paced the floor of the reception room of Lyman

The Lake Tahoe Ski Club held its regular weekly meeting at Tahoe Community Center on Friday night

Brooks & Sheldon like a leopardess with lashing tail.

Lionel Brooks' eyes were filled with dark worry. "Sit down, Mrs. DeWitt. Sorry to have kept you waiting."

Brooks plunged ahead. "I visit Mr. DeWitt every day in his cell. Yesterday he commissioned me to advise you that, if he is acquitted of the murder charge, he will institute divorce proceedings immediately."

Something in the depths of the woman's large Spanish eyes began to shimmer and Brooks went on hurriedly. "He has authorized me to offer you a settlement of twenty thousand a year for the remainder of your married life, if you will not contest the action. Under the circumstances it is a very generous offer."

Mrs. DeWitt said in a hard voice. "And I fight?"

"He will cut you off without a penny."

Without a word she arose and left. A week later Drury Lane was ushered by a Japanese into Frederick Lyman's duplex apartment. A rather handsome man of medium height, in dinner clothes, came forward and shook hands.

"I take it you are encountering difficulties in your defense, Mr. Lyman?"

The September army maneuvers in Louisiana provided America's newest light and medium bombers with a splendid opportunity to prove their mettle. And from all accounts, these fast and highly maneuverable aircraft clearly demonstrated their ability to carry out the most difficult mission, under conditions closely paralleling those of actual warfare.

The Army Air Forces utilized three light and medium bomber types in the maneuvers—the North American B-25 and Martin B-26 in the latter category and the Douglas A-20A in the light class. Official accounts indicate the ships performed very well right down the line and were particularly impressive in night flying and take-offs and landings after dark. Europe's war has stressed the importance of these tasks.

Army pilots, who have tested the three ships under all sorts of conditions, confidently believe them to be superior in range, speed and load abilities to any foreign bombers of their class. And the Air Corps has nothing but praise for their performance in night flying and night landings, as evidenced by the following material taken from official reports:

"The handling characteristics of the B-25 have proven excellent, as demonstrated by the fact that young pilots with 350 to 450 hours on other types can handle them proficiently after a few hours of transition work. All of these airplanes are being flown at night in addition to daytime flying.

"The A-20A is practically identical to the DB-7B, which has been modified, by increasing the offensive armament, as a night fighter in England. It is noted that these airplanes have been highly commended for their qualities as night fighters. In fact, the British official tests state that this is the best handling twin-engine airplane ever tested.

"The B-26, being a newer type, has not yet completed all its accelerated service tests. In spite of this, a number of these planes have been sent on maneuvers for special services."

The Air Corps points out that new ships like the B-25, B-26 and A20A have higher landing speeds than planes several years older, but that these speeds have been compensated for by the use of the tricycle landing gear, a development pioneered by American aircraft manufacturers. The three-wheeled gear, which brings a warplane in on a level keel, greatly facilitates ground handling, particularly at night. As one pilot put it the other day:

"Once you've made contact with the ground, you have the feeling that you can close your eyes and let the ship roll home by itself."

TAHOE AREA LAKES NAMED STRANGELY

The following item appeared in the North Sacramento Tribune-Progress last week under the by-line of Peggy and Melton Ferris:

"Future historians will probably puzzle much over the names of certain Sierra mountain lakes which

"For instance, there are Lake Ropi, Lake Gelo, Lake Waca and Lake Toem, in Desolation Valley, between Placerville and Lake Tahoe. Their names are combinations of parts of sound Indian but aren't the first and last names of members of the Mt. Ralston Fish Planting club, Ross Pierce, George Foss, Walter Campbell and Tom Emerald.

"Pierce, a prominent Sacramentan, estimates the club has planted fish in 120 Sierra mountain lakes and named many after club members. The peculiar name combination sounded Indian and seemed to suit the character of the country.

"More obscure are origins of some other Sierra mountain names such as Louise Creek, near Lake Elsinore, and Shirt-tail canyon south of Colfax along the main course of the American river.

"Sportsmen believe Shirt-tail canyon's name is a relic of the days of '49 when miners' washing flapped there in the breeze."

COLDEST LAKE

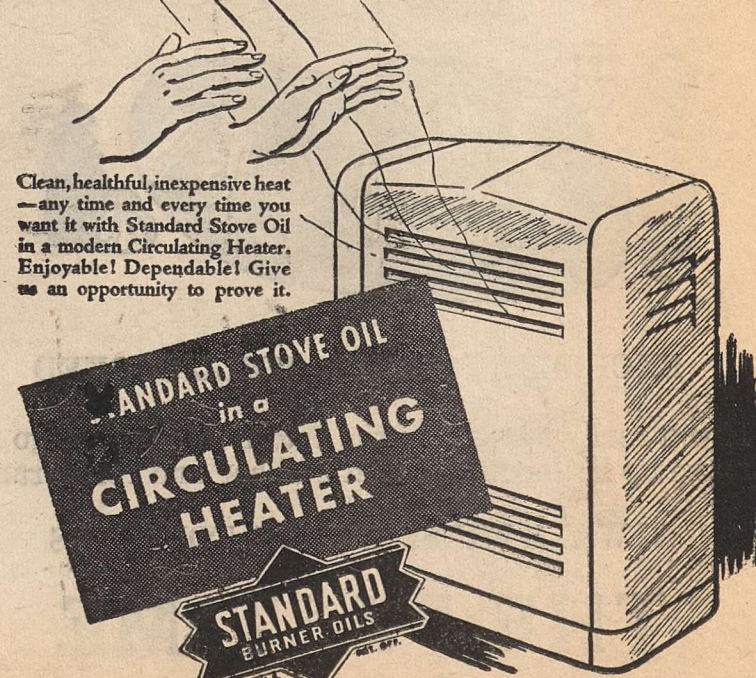

Lake Superior is the coldest of the Great Lakes. Its temperature is seldom higher than 40 degrees.

California hotels and resorts enjoyed the best summer this year since 1929.

POLITICAL GOSSIP

Rumor has it that President Roosevelt will appoint Governor Olson to succeed Josephus Daniels as ambassador to Mexico. If Olson accepts, the elections next year will be a political free-for-all.
